SAMPLE SESSION TOPIC

Disruption: How Ubertrends Change Values and Reshape Innovation

Massive waves pound the shores of society, irreversibly altering its landscape. Dubbed "Ubertrends" and carrying such monikers as Digital Lifestyle and Unwired, these tsunamis are leading to tectonic value changes among businesses and consumers. Ubertrends are the driving forces behind warp-speed technological advancements and perplexing consumer behavior, and play a key role in transforming our future.

In an exhilarating ride through the landscape of now, Silicon Valley insider Michael Tchong paints a riveting tableau of a world reshaped by these powerful phenomena and how Ubertrends inspire disruptive innovations in automotive, hospitality, retail and travel. You'll be spellbound by Michael's uncanny insights plus actionable thought starters, including his deft portrayal of the most remarkable Ubertrend of all, Time Compression -- The Acceleration of Life.

Executives and professionals alike realize that relentless innovation is key to financial success. Why is innovating mission-critical? As Microsoft Co-Founder Bill Gates puts it, "innovation fundamentally shifts the trajectory of development." And as Ubertrends cascade through society leaving many subtrends in their wake, they not only reshape human behavior but also open the door for many breakthroughs.

Michael has been a leading trend forecaster for decades. He regularly speaks at leading industry and C-suite events around the world. Michael is the Founder and Publisher of Ziff-Davis' MacWEEK. He is an Adjunct Professor of Innovation and Social Media at the University of San Francisco and UC Berkeley, and is writing his third book, Ubertrends — How Trends And Innovation Are Transforming Our Future, which will be published in 2018. He maintains a blog at ubercool.com.
