You may not recognize Matthew Luhn's name, but you definitely know his work: The Simpsons, Toy Story, Monsters Inc., Finding Nemo, Cars, UP, and Ratatouille. After a 20+ year career at Disney/Pixar, he turned his focus to helping the corporate world leverage the art and science of storytelling for business success, authoring The Best Story Wins and consulting companies such as Charles Schwab and Adidas.

He has delighted a range of Fortune 1000 audiences including Apple, Capital One, Clorox, Facebook, Gartner, Google, Microsoft, PayPal, Procter & Gamble, Sony, Target, and Vrbo. His keynotes and workshops have been featured at BNY Mellon, BMW, Walt Disney Imagineering, Walt Disney Family Museum, Lego, Prudential Insurance, Salesforce, Volkswagen, Wells Fargo, and many more.

Matthew Luhn's inspiring personal story, from a third-generation toy store owner's son to Pixar storyteller, models one of his best storytelling tips: capture your audience in eight seconds or less. His early life drawing with his dad, getting accepted to CalArts, and being recruited by Steve Jobs to join Pixar is part of the magic he shares in every keynote.

He is also an award-winning filmmaker, most recently writing and directing the animated short Sprite Fright.

Matthew Luhn's highly entertaining talks have earned glowing reviews, lauding his talent as a teacher and passion for providing any audience with the tools to immediately activate storytelling skills for business success. As the president of one host company wrote, "Matthew Luhn has an incredible ability to captivate an audience through the art of storytelling. Unveiling some of the most insightful techniques used in Pixar films, he can effortlessly simplify complex ideas into concise messages—a valued skill in business. Matthew highlighted actionable tactics that sharpened my own team's storytelling skills right away."

Why Matthew Luhn?

Matthew Luhn has heard thousands of great ideas while working at Pixar, The Simpsons, and ILM, but how is it that some of these ideas make great movies and TV shows, while others don't make the cut? The answer: the best innovators and directors have developed a process that focuses their team's creativity into not only creating great ideas but also fleshing them out – something Matthew has experienced firsthand.

PROGRAMAS

AI & Storytelling

In this uplifting and empowering talk, master storyteller Matthew Luhn shares how AI is being used as a tool, copilot, and muse to create new ideas and stories for entertainment, business, and beyond. As one of the first animators on Toy Story, the first computer-generated animated film released by Pixar, Matthew is well versed in how new technology can transform an industry and create memorable stories. Matthew's story credits include Toy Story 1, 2, and 3, Monsters Inc., Finding Nemo, Cars, UP, and Ratatouille. Like CG (computer) animation, AI is another tool in our storytelling toolkit—enhancing, not replacing creativity and innovation. Matthew will share his tips on how to use AI to bridge the gap between new technology and great storytelling.
